

Krishna consciousness is my privilege, not my inalienable right.

I am extremely fortunate and humbled to realise this great fortune.

Eventually my practice will become unmotivated just as my receiving mercy is an unmotivated example of fortuity.

However, Just as a mustard seed on the tip of a dagger can fall either way; so my privileged position of remembering the divine couple can withdraw.

Feeling equally wretched and regal, I beg the blessings of my beloved Guru Maharaj and submit my soul to the sound incarnation, the holy name.